THE KNOLL

A Letter From The Editor

We've managed to complete twelve grades, earn eighteen credits, and pass all our basic competencies. All of a sudden we're finished with high school and graduation is here. Now what? For the first time it is all up to us.

This year has been a mixture of ups and downs. Some days we feel trapped. Studying, signing in and out of study hall, filling out applications, meeting deadlines, the 12:06 P.M. jungle of the lunch line, and endless practices pile up and suffocate us. These are "Let-me-out-of-here" days.

Then there are days when everything flies by, dragging us unwillingly along with them so fast that we want to make everything stop and wait. We secretly make "This is the last time I'll ever . . ." speeches to ourselves about classes, people, and sports. Without warning, things tend to get sentimental.

The last couple of months of school have marbled together completely different feelings: relief, pride, worry, optimism, and excitement. It is frightening but we would never turn back. We're ready to get on with living. LOOK OUT WORLD, HERE COMES THE CLASS OF 1981! — S. Carter, Editor

STUDENTS REVEAL TRUE SELVES ON COSTUME DAY

Costume Day was a success at Twinfield. This day was a spirit building day and it was an opportunity for youngsters who do not ordinarily become involved in school activities to participate. This day also served to break up the daily routine of school. Costume Day was sponsored by the Sr. High Student Council. — R. Shanley

WRITING PROCESS TAUGHT

The English Department offers a variety of learning experiences. Students write and perform radio shows, visit area businesses, see Shakespearean plays, and read and study traditional literary works.

Mrs. Auld's approach to improving writing skills is of particular interest. This approach has grown from her participation in the UVM Writing Project. Each student chooses a subject or writes to discover a subject for an article. Brainstorming, sharing ideas, and conferencing with other students and the teacher are catalysts to the writing experience. Class members participate with one another in the growth from preliminary drafts through to the final edited revisions. The emphasis is on development of the individual writer and the discovery by each student of his or her own abilities as a writer.

SPECIAL SERVICES

The Title I Reading and Resource Room programs are designed to supplement a student's educational program. They provide help in reading, writing, and math skills and study techniques. Students in these programs have individualized plans which allow them to receive help based on their particular needs. The programs serve junior and senior high school students. — S. Terry & D. SO. STUDIES PREPARE STUDENTS FOR CITIZENSHIP

The study of history, geography, and current affairs prepares students for the responsibilities of citizenship. The program at Twinfield helps students become aware of the trends and movements of the past and to relate those to the governments and cultures of the present so that they may become intelligent and active citizens of their state and country. Our future will be determined by the decisions and actions of the students of today.

LIBRARY

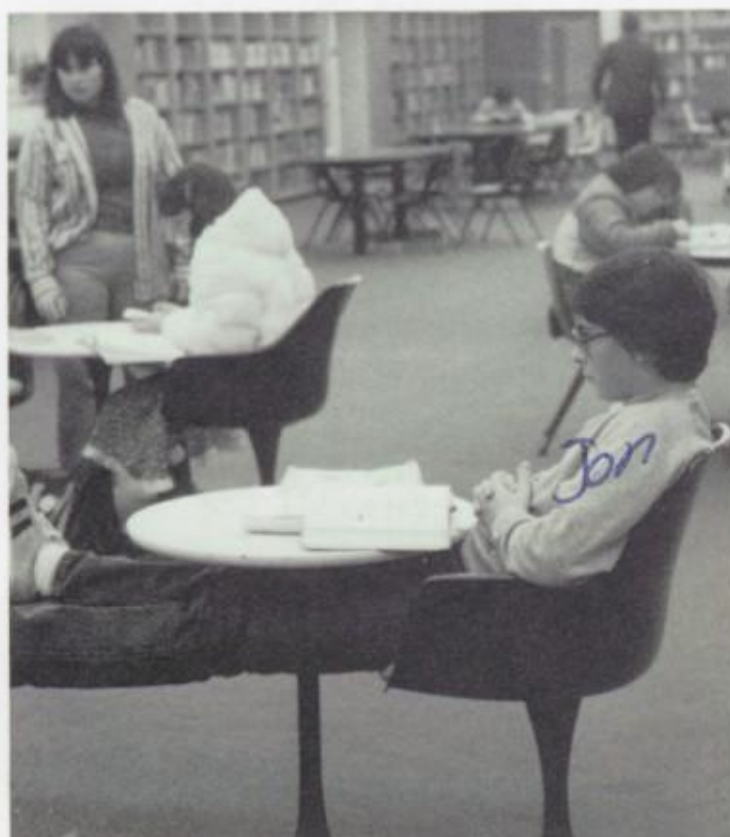

"Please make them return those overdue books," thinks Mrs. Gilman.

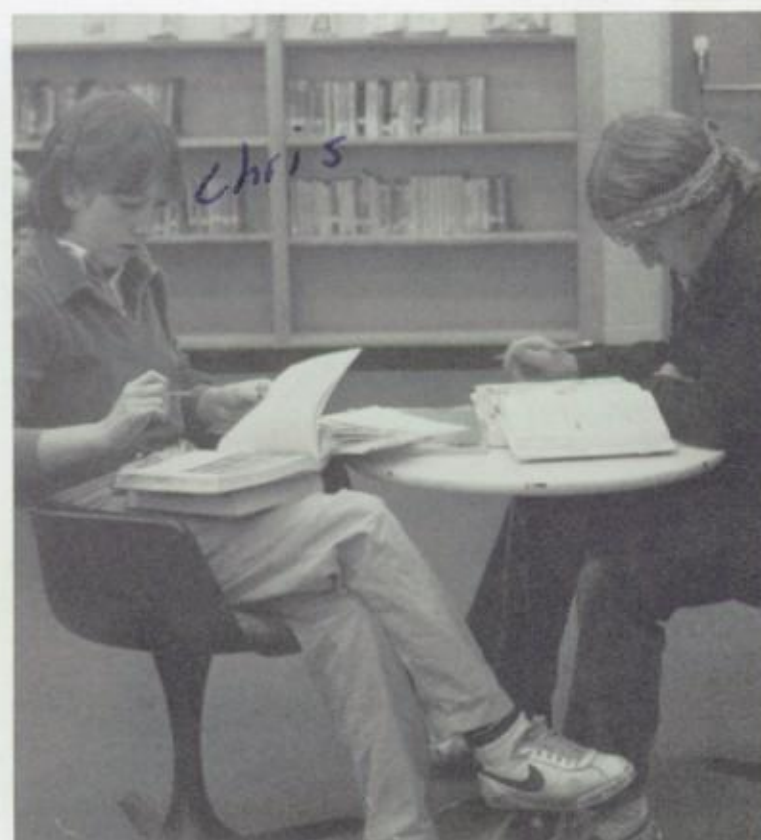

Twinfield High School Library plays an active role in the students' and faculty's daily lives. It offers a quiet place of study, a wide variety of resources for research work and a comfortable place to browse and read. Additions are continually being made to the already substantial collection of print and non-print materials in order to best supplement the curriculum. — L. Gilman

MATH DEPARTMENT

Another student stretches his mind with computer games.

COMPUTER COURSE NOW OFFERED

The math department is continuously striving to meet two major goals. First, to provide all students with a solid background in the fundamentals of math; and secondly, to provide a challenging and enriching experience for those who may continue their education to the next higher level. This year a new course, Computer Programming, has been added to the curriculum. — P. McCormack

SCIENCE TEACHES THINKING

In a time when scientific advances are raising increasingly difficult ethical and environmental questions, familiarity with scientific principles is essential to good citizenship. The science department tries to help students keep informed about current scientific discoveries, and encourages critical thinking in all areas. — J. Bollard

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT

Students in the business classes acquire skills that help them succeed in the competitive world. Students learn typing, accounting, shorthand, and office practices. They also learn how to write resumes and present themselves to potential employers.

Dawn and Cindy prepare for lucrative careers.

"No, Cindy, you can't take home the Xerox machine," Mrs. Carreau sighs.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS

Industrial Arts provides students with an opportunity to learn the fundamentals of drafting, furniture construction, welding, and metal craft. They also learn to use and maintain a variety of power and hand tools. This year students have designed, organized, and completed many useful and artistically pleasing projects.

Greg Barcomb puts the finishing touches on a design.

Headed for the New York Philharmonic!

Sixth graders study musical terms.

"Whew! That was hard work," sighs Justin.

Several performing groups are offered to students here at Twinfield. The sixth graders have one year of general music in which they learn how to sing, play, write, and listen to music from the baroque to the popular. Next comes the junior high chorus and the high school band. For high school students who want to sing, the high school chorus is offered. The music department plans to build up the instrumental program so that junior high as well as senior high band can be available. — D. Stone

LITERARY WORK

Chili

Chili is like eating spring
because it is so sensationally warm in the winter,
When it slides tingling down your throat,
It warms your chilly stomach.
When it is all gone you're pleasantly plump and comfortably full.
But then you feel kind of sorry because

HIGH SCHOOL ART

This year the high school art class concentrated on drawing. The class worked very hard to improve drawing skills. Various exercises such as contour drawing, negative space drawing, outdoor sketching, and drawing from a model were included in the study. These exercises helped students overcome problems with perspective, proportion, and composition. Examples of this work is shown in this portfolio. We only wish we had room for more. — R. Pulaski

1980 SPRING MUSICAL

The Music and Drama departments teamed up in an experimental project of bringing community members into the school to work with students on a production of "Music Man". Twenty adults joined 40 students in grades one through twelve on stage, off stage, and in the orchestra pit to produce a successful show that filled the auditorium three consecutive evenings. Four and a half months of rehearsing, making costumes, building an extension on the stage, and various other activities brought together people of all ages doing something to be proud of.

GIRLS' VARSITY BASKETBALL

The Trojan girls proved to many doubting coaches and spectators this year that they had the ability to play good, competitive basketball. They compiled a respectable 10-10 record (most of their losses were by less than eight points) by the end of the season. Coach Gail Bottiggi had worked with most of the girls since the sixth grade and a very close relationship existed between her and the team members. Six girls will be lost to graduation: Sheila Perry, Lori Foster, Sally Richardson, Jayne Dowd, Cindy Willard, Stephanie Carter. Returning next year will be Karen Chase, Debbie Johnson, Karen Higgs, Karlyn Schmitt, and Vicki Sayers.

BOYS' VARSITY BASKETBALL

The Boys' Varsity Basketball Team, under the direction of Coach Mike Maxwell had a very successful year. The Trojans ended their regular season with a fine 14-6 record, and found themselves seeded fourth in the state. Tournament play for the boys ended in a heartbreaking loss to Blue Mountain in their quarter final game. Members of the team: Mark Fowler, Ted Cochran, Ian Smith, Wayne Emmons, Bill Smith, Robby Bartlett, David Tetreault, Mike MacLauren, Matthew Dix, Cory Copeland, and Dick Emmons.
